

ABSTRACT

A skateboard with vibration-absorbing function comprises a platform, a coupling stage formed on bottom center of the platform, two swing members connected to two distal ends of the coupling stage, at least two resilient members arranged between the coupling stage and the swing members, at least two wheels, each arranged below the swing member and corresponding to the resilient member. The resilient members provide vibration-absorbing function to the skateboard.